Beautiful Photos.

Within a day or two past we have seen some very fine views of the Throne Room at the Palace, in which the coffin of His late Majesty is lying in State, surrounded with its beautiful paraphernalia of royalty, taken by Mr. Williams. There will be several views in the set, and we are safe in saying that no pictures equal to these have ever been taken on any previous occasion of the kind. They will not be ready to offer to the public till after the funeral, when the series illustrating events before and after the funeral, will be complete. When finished, the series will make one of the best mementoes of the occasion procurable.

An Illustrated Edition for the Mail.

A full and detailed report of the funeral will appear in the WEEKLY GAZETTE, which will be issued at 12 o'clock on Monday, which will enable correspondents to secure copies for posting in time to go forward by the Charleston's mail on Tuesday. Orders for this illustrated edition of the GAZETTE may be sent in advance to the news companies or to the publication office, 46 Merchant street, and all such orders will be filled at once after the paper is issued, and sent to the parties ordering them.

J. Waiman and others. Mr. Wray Taylor has charge of the services; he will play several selections on the organ.

This memorial service will be given partly from the fact that the late King was much interested in the construction of the church. The chime of bells and the design of the organ were the results of his suggestions. No charge will be made for seats.

The Sunday school and the morning service will be omitted on account of the obsequies of His late Majesty. At the evening service the pastor will preach upon "The Tribute due to our New Sovereign." A discourse for all good citizens.

A STORY.

Is told of a young lady not long since, having taken an old fashioned and very large bull's-eye watch to a jeweler in the States, and wanting him to make two smaller ones of the same; one for her and one for her sister. He told her it could not be done; and she left him with a very poor opinion of his skill and ability.

He could not accomplish an impossibility, nor can we; but I'll tell you what we can do. For instance, if you are the possessor of a good watch but unfortunately a key-winder; and constantly annoyed by losing the key, or tearing your nails in opening the case, we can convert your watch into a fine smooth stem-winder.

We also fit your watch with a Breguet hair-spring and patent regulator making closer regulating possible.
